

Starlight

Project: LiquidFusion

Starlight is introducing the first workflow processing AI that allows human workers to seamlessly architect reliable, accountable, and safe-guarded enterprise-level systems that scale with time.

What is workflow processing?

Enterprise systems value business logic and process above direct innovation, much in the same way nobody ever was fired for buying IBM. We respect that, while acknowledging that much of the grinding of gears of business logic can be means-tested and adjudicated into foundational process.

What is foundational process?

Glad you asked! Foundational processes are the back-of-your-mind never-think about factors of business operations which require people and software to also persistently update and confirm. Not only do you need that document and head when the sensors click an alarm but you need to make sure all the habits and processes business operations are selling for market value are truth.

Is this an unemployment engine?

Yes. You should hope so. But much like community colleges exist to circulate labor capital inside the state to persisting workers of the state, the employees replaced are only as unemployed as their manager prepares their next pathways to be. Either be good management or unemploy them.

What systemic commerce changes around us?

Exactly. Now you are thinking like an enterprise manager. We should talk to get you on the good path before you, too, are unemployed by the winds of AI coming to computer systems we all use.

What does the funnel look like to work with Starlight?

We want to automate an executive manager of thirty people in your company in less than two years, which is a question of company structure only the boss at the top can answer. We want to work with no less than five companies across multiple verticals outside neighboring school districts.

Work starts small. Research deliverables initiate change. Processes are self-healing and scale, so ask executive managers' managers which processes are withered, brittle, under-reported, or not in the company system. We work at the speed of company division restructuring: not our AI capacity.

Think about that? The workflow processing builds the lifeblood of enterprise, and business logic builds the currency of every specialist; locked in your head, locked in fragile data, locked in habits.

Starlight LLC

There's always StarLight